SteelMaster Buildings Maintains A+ Standards

When it comes to customer service, ethics, and integrity, SteelMaster Buildings means business.

The company's commitment to high standards has earned them an average for two decades with the Better Business Bureau (BBB), a consumer organization that monitors a company's record of addressing customer complaints. A company affiliated with the organization agrees to conform to the BBB's code of business practices and accedes to cooperate with them to resolve any disputes. According to the BBB, an A+ rating is exemplary and means that they have no doubt about the company's trustworthiness.

Artistic Expression at a Steel

Bobby Furst is not one to shy away from making a statement; in fact, he creates politically and socially-inspired assemblage art pieces from found and acquired objects to encourage dialogue among the masses. When it came time to relocate his studio space and workshop from the glitz and glamour of Hollywood, Calif. to the foothills of the Mohave desert in Joshua Tree, Calif., he chose to build a compound of three buildings with steel.

The Winds May Howl, but the SteelMaster Stays

Imagine a hurricane that packs such a wallop that map makers would be forced to redraw North Carolina's coastline. It's a possibility for the Outer Banks—a 130-mile string of barrier islands which jut out and chisel the ocean's edge like few others throughout the world. A hurricane bearing an especially powerful surge could overwhelm the Outer Banks with sea water, sending an artillery of 25 foot waves that would obliterate anything standing in its way.

Or would it?
